ABOUT THE MAJOR

Community Outreach

This program is focused on demonstrating the linkages that children and families have with peers, schools, community agencies, sources of social policy, and varied cultural context. Students will be able to participate in experiential learning through internships and field placements that will allow students to apply knowledge in career-related settings. The Community Outreach program allows students to focus on working with children and families within educational programs, community services and other professional settings.

Child and Family Studies majors must maintain a 2.5 cumulative GPA and complete all CFS classes with a C or better.
