ABOUT THE MAJOR

Kinesiology
The study of biomechanics of the human body

The Kinesiology major prepares students for a career in health and wellness, graduate study in Kinesiology, or professional school (physical therapy, physician assistant, athletic training, medical school, etc.). The program features a built-in internship experience and flexible 15+ hours of professional elective content. In addition, the Kinesiology major offers student organizations that help connect students with educational and career opportunities within the Kinesiology field. Organizations like the American Kinesiology Association and the Kinesiology Student Association (KSA) are great ways to volunteer in the community, hear insightful guest speakers, and connect with other Kinesiology students on campus.
